| Saturday, July 25th Basketball Tournament & Ollie Edinboro Court Ribbon Cutting Location in Park: Ollie Edinboro Playground 140th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue | Monday, July 27th, 7:30 PM – 10:00 PM ImageNation Film Festival - Co-presented with the NY Latino Film Festival and MGM Location: 135th Street Plaza Live Music (7:30pm) Film: Fame (8:30pm) Directed by Alan Parker 130 minutes; 1980 (classic!) Revisit the classic and see a sneak preview of the upcoming FAME tv series. Seven classes a day and a hot lunch. That's what New York City's High School for the Performing Arts guarantees. Stardom? That's something the school's teenage musicians, actors, dancers and dreamers strive for. "Fame" sings the body electric, celebrating the growing-up process of honing talent, confronting realities, finding love, living life. Director Alan Parker ("Evita", "The Commitments") brings an energetic style to the crisscrossing stories of students (including future Academy Award winner Irene Cara, Paul McCrane ("ER"), Barry Miller ("Saturday Night Fever"). Nominated for six Academy Awards, "Fame" won Oscars for its dynamic score and title tune. | |
| Wednesday, July 29th, 7:00 PM – 10:00 PM Historic Harlem Parks Coalition Film Festival Location: 135th Street Plaza Rain Site: St. Mark's Church, 55 Edgecombe Ave. btw. After a slew of bad break-ups, Jay gives up white women, "cold turkey," and he goes on a mission: "Operation Brown Sugar". But because Jay doesn't fit the "brotha" stereotype, he fails miserably with the "sistahs." Then he meets the dynamic Catherine, a misunderstood "Half-rican Canadian", who's as righteously quirky as he is. To win her heart, Jay must confront his fears as he realizes commitment is a bigger issue than race. I'M THROUGH WITH WHITE GIRLS is a quirky romantic-comedy addressing race, class, and cultural identity in America. | |
